

Best fish + chips in Delaware?

April 26, 2012 by Patricia Talorico

Just stopped into go brit! fish + chips on Del. 1, near Lewes. (Right across from Bethany Blues restaurant.)

It's Alison Blyth's new, sibling eatery to her flagship go fish! British fish + chips shop and restaurant in Rehoboth Beach.

I've long been convinced that Alison offers the best fish + chips in Delaware. Indeed, I think she has some of the best fish + chips I've ever eaten.

So, I was wondering how it would go at the second location.

It's a fun, light-hearted spot that Anglophiles should love. That's Alison's car. It doesn't run anymore, but it's a cool decoration.

I think she told me it's the same model – a British Leyland Mini 1000 – that Mr. Bean used to drive.

This is a very casual spot. Don't you love the Mind the Gap sign? Last time I visited London, I took the Underground everywhere. I was hearing that voice saying, Mind the Gap, in my sleep.

No wait staff. You order at the counter. They do have beer. If you're eating in, they'll deliver the food to the table.

I got takeout – but I warn you: Eat it right away. Fish + chips ($10.95) is like pasta, it waits for no one.

The crispiness of the batter will begin to soften if you wait too long. You don't want that to happen. Soggy is not good when it comes to fish + chips.

This batter is so terrific. It's light, crunchy, wonderful. The fish is moist. Just as good as the Rehoboth location. They give you tartar sauce, but I asked for vinegar for dipping.

We don't have royals here in the states, but I do think Alison should be crowned Queen of Fish + Chips.
